Recent Trends and Future Prospects for Mortality Research

Richard G. Rogers
SDA Plenary Speaker 2017

Rick Rogers is Professor of Sociology and IBS Population Program Faculty Affiliate at the University of Colorado. His main research interests focus on social demography and medical sociology. Much of his previous work examined social, demographic, and behavioral differences in adult mortality. For example, with Eileen Crimmins (University of Southern California), he coedited the International Handbook of Adult Mortality (2011, Springer). He is currently collaborating with coauthors Bob Hummer (University of North Carolina) and Patrick Krueger (University of Colorado Denver) to revise and update his chapter, "Adult Mortality," for the new edition of the Handbook of Population (New York: Kluwer Springer). And his ongoing NICHD-funded project with Bob Hummer examines differences in early life mortality. Overall, his research endeavors to better understand ways to improve health and lengthen life.

Reflections on Investigating Micro and Macro Dynamics with Reference to Residential Segregation

Mark Fossett
SDA President 2016-2017

Mark Fossett is Professor of Sociology and College of Liberal Arts Cornerstone Faculty Fellow at Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas. He received his Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of Texas at Austin in 1983 and held positions at Louisiana State University and the University of Texas at Austin before joining the Sociology Department at Texas A&M University in 1989. In recent years he has served as Department Head (2005-2011) and as Executive Director of the Texas Federal Statistical Research Data Center (2011-present). He first attended the Southern Demographic Association meetings in 1978 and 39 years later is serving as President of the Southern Demographic Association 2017. His areas of research and teaching interest include social and urban demography, racial and ethnic segregation and inequality, and quantitative research methods. His research has been supported by a variety of organizations including NSF, NIH, the Ford Foundation, and the Rockefeller Foundation. His publications include articles in American Sociological Review, Journal of Mathematical Sociology, Social Forces, Demography, Journal of Marriage and the Family, Sociological Methods and Research, Social Science Quarterly, Rural Sociology, Social Science Research, Urban Affairs Review, Environment and Planning B, Urban Studies, American Behavioral Scientist, and Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, numerous book chapters, and the book Long Time Coming: Racial Inequality in the Non-Metropolitan South, 1940-1990.

Over the past decade his research has focused on exploring segregation dynamics using computational models and on improving methods of measuring and analyzing segregation. His methodological work is summarized in the book New Methods for Measuring and Analyzing Segregation (2017). The SDA address will reflect on demographers' efforts to document and understand residential segregation giving particular attention to challenges encountered in trying to establish how micro- and macro-level factors and processes shape and maintain the differential spatial distribution of population groups. It also will note new opportunities for progress going forward.

SDA Plenary Speaker 2017

Dr. Ortman joined the U.S. Census Bureau in 2009 as a demographer leading the production of the national population projections and collaborating on efforts to improve the population estimates. In 2015, Dr. Ortman became the Assistant Division Chief for Social Characteristics in the Social, Economic, and Housing Statistics Division of the U.S. Census Bureau. She oversaw the production and analysis of data on social characteristics, including migration, commuting patterns, family composition, marital status, fertility, child care, education, voting, internet use, and language. In December 2016, she became the Assistant Division Chief for Survey Methods and Measures in the American Community Survey Office, where she provides technical leadership and broad programmatic oversight for the research and evaluation work related to the American Community Survey. Dr. Ortman has co-authored reports on topics such as the older population and baby boom cohort and has appeared twice on C-SPAN's "America by the Numbers" to discuss her findings.
