Population Research and Policy Review (PRPR) now welcomes research briefs! These are expected to consist of data-forward research on population issues, especially those with policy relevance. These pieces cannot already be published in other journals, and will not incorporate an extensive literature review or conceptual framework. We expect to publish Briefs more rapidly than traditional research articles, as the relatively short format is useful for scientists with results that are time sensitive.

Research Briefs must:
- Be less than 2,500 words, excluding references
- Not have more than five tables and figures (combined)
- Rare exceptions to these rules may be granted by the editors

If you have any further queries, please contact PRPR editors-in-chief Kara Joyner and Corey Sparks. (Kara Joyner: kjoyner@bgsu.edu and Corey Sparks: corey.sparks@utsa.edu)
David A. Swanson, University of California Riverside

Per an invitation from Dr. Tommy Wright, Chief of the Center for Statistical Research & Methodology, Swanson will be visiting the U.S. Bureau of the Census on June 18-20 as a 2019 SUMMER AT CENSUS scholar.

He has been invited to engage in collaborative research with Census Bureau researchers and staff and to prepare and present a SUMMER AT CENSUS seminar based on his research. Swanson’s seminar talk will be based on the book Cohort Change Ratios and Their Applications by J. Baker, D. Swanson, J. Tayman, and L. Tedrow.

Swanson and co-authors Augustine Kposowa and Jack Baker have also been listed as Population Review’s feature authors for their work on the article “Estimating the Underlying Infant Mortality Rates for Small Populations, Including those Reporting Zero Infant Deaths: A Case Study of Counties in California.”
